Every day we hear different arguments about legality and fairness of the admissions practices used at elite colleges and universities, but how do we make sense of the claims and counter-claims? This panel of four leading experts will draw on their extensive research to bring light to this debate.

Panel Discussion by

- Christopher Avery, Roy E. Larsen Professor of Public Policy, Harvard Kennedy School
- Mitchell Stevens, Associate Professor of Sociology, Stanford Graduate School of Education
- Natasha Warikoo, Associate Professor of Education, Harvard Graduate School of Education
- Philip Lee, Professor of Law, University District of Columbia